4. Action motions for debate asking for funding

Motion 1: OPS Uni Slam Team entry fee

The JCR notes:

Oxford Poetry Society is putting together a team for the annual UniSlam Poetry competition held this year in Birmingham. The entry fee for the team is £60 before any money goes towards transport, accommodation etc. The proposer, Audrey Davidson-Houston, is the President of OPS this year and is aiming to bring back slam poetry to the university. Due to the society's lapse during Covid we aren't currently able to receive funding from the university so this money would go a long way towards helping the team to get there. Slam Poetry has a long history in bringing people together to share their cultures, backgrounds and beliefs. Its emphasis on performance and shared emotion gives it an important and often overlooked spot in the poetry space.

The JCR believes:

This money would help OPS to secure a spot in the national competition, putting Oxford back on the map for slam and spoken word poetry. The students involved span both undergraduate and masters students from St Hugh's and this is an opportunity for colleges and year groups across the university to come together. A student from St Hugh's won the Oxford Slam competition when it last ran in 2009 and hopefully by bringing students together for this competition we can get the Oxford based one back up and running. St Hugh's has a legacy of fantastic creativity and this money would be hugely beneficial in restarting the tradition.

The JCR resolves to:

give £60 to the Oxford Poetry Society to be used for the entry fee to the UniSlam Poetry competition this year.

Proposer and seconder:

Audrey Davidson-Houston and Erin Butler

Audrey adds:

- Team of students going, entry fee must be paid this week or next week
- As others are paying for transport and accom, it would be good if college could provide help
- Oxford hasn't entered for a few years, would be helpful if Hugh's could support

Motion 2: Fund Monstrous Regiment

The JCR notes:

- a. The play Monstrous Regiment will take place in the Michael Pilch Studio in 5th week of Hilary Term.
- b. Two JCR members are involved, one as an assistant director and another as a major role in the cast.
- c. Picnic Productions is a new production company and needs to raise the funds for the rights and venue, as well as the cost of set, props, and costume.
- d. The rights cost £720 and the venue costs £400, which is significant expenditure for a new production company; any support the JCR could provide will go a long way.
- e. Those involved in student drama are responsible for raising the funds to put on the play, from funding bodies and their JCRs.

The JCR believes:

We should support artistic endeavours and the artistic development of JCR members

The JCR resolves to:

Give £60 to Picnic Productions from the JCR.

Motion 3: Motion to donate £120 to Little Shop of Horrors (Cross Keys x 2046 Productions)

The JCR notes:

Cross Keys x 2046 Productions are putting on a student production of Little Shop of Horrors (18th-22nd February) in the Keble O'Reilly Theatre. There are three members of the JCR involved in this production in the roles of Producer, Production Manager, and Assistant Director. This production is committed to inclusivity and diversity. We proactively contacted groups under-represented in Oxford's student drama scene during the recruitment process, such as Oxford ACS, Jsoc, Wocsoc, and so on. This successfully brought first-timers to Oxford student theatre into the project. The more senior members of the team aim to give less experienced members a supportive environment for learning. This is a production of a grand scale, involving puppetry, a live band, and a tiered set. Significant upfront funding is needed to cover these costs.

The JCR believes:

Funding from JCRs ensures that student theatre remains accessible to all and their support allows creatives to build large-scale shows. Without support from JCRs, many aspects of this production would prove impossible to achieve.

Grants from JCRs allow student productions to maintain their low ticket costs, allowing theatre to be accessed by audiences of all backgrounds.

The JCR resolves to:

Donate £120 to Cross Keys x 2046 Productions to support their production of Little Shop of Horrors.

Proposer and Seconder:

Jess Phillips, Michelle Tse

POI:

- Asking for more than usual as a technical and ambitious production
- Marketing campaign and set
- Relying heavily on JCR funding because no loan from Oxford drama society
- President: meeting by meeting budget of about £200, don't want to use budget used up earlier in the term, proposes £80
